Neil Murray

London band The Hamptons have been a mainstay of BURBs pretty much since the beginning. With an output of ten albums and one extremely highly regarded and seminal ep (containing the song which is still regarded in some quarters as 'the' BURBs anthem) over a period of ten years, Neil Murray and his assorted strolling players continue to dish out witty and concise pop songs with memorable hooks on a regular basis.

Neil was the obvious choice to fill the Kevin Rowlands role on Come on England, and despite talkSPORT's Mike Parry joking that in fact it was himself doing the singing, we can assure you that 4-4-2's lead vocalist is most definitely Neil Murray, with other Hamptons Marky Millin, Nick Lacey and Dan Warwick all playing vital roles as well.

The Hamptons have made regular appearances on BURBsAudio compilations: The Best Thing About London Town featured on BURBs Too!, Lennon/McCartney cover Help! was on Red, White & Blue, Don't Take That Away on Pirate Audio, and most recently the superb Garçon appeared on suBURBan legends - London. The Best Thing About London Town can be download in high quality mp3 format by clicking here.

The Hamptons were BURBs Artists of the Month way back in May 2000, but gigs are all too rare, unfortunately. However, you can console yourself by clicking on the links further down the page to find out what we've been going on about all these years ...
