Come on 4-4-2

MADAM – It was great to see your paper supporting 4-4-2 and the two local members in their bid for the charts.

I've heard the song Come on Eileen being played many times throughout the Euro 2004 campaign so it's great to know a bit more about some of those involved particularly since they all look like genuine fans who are really enjoying themselves.

What a surprise to learn that Neil Murray is actually a lawyer working in the City of London, I bet there can't be too many of his colleagues who have had a number two record in the charts.

As he says 'a triumph for every guy who has ever stood in front of the mirror playing air guitar' and a phrase that makes Neil sound like just a regular bloke.

Though they dropped one place last week, I still hope England keep on winning and he and the other members of 4-4-2 manage to hit the number one spot.
